Little praise could have been substracted from a team that upset the oddsmakers, fooled the experts, defied a losing precedent and, though lacking in depth, capitalized on every break as it battled its way to a four-and-three record.

Gridbits Worthy of Mention

During that bygone age might have included the solid line play of Co-Captains Knepper and Campbell.

Or, one could have turned to the efforts of Rodman Nine, two year All-Conference Tackle in the old NIAA.

Perhaps the reader would have regarded as noteworthy the performances of Everett and Madison, each of whom broke up games with winning sprints.

One would not disregard Stone, who could pass and boot.

An 80-yard pass play from Stone to Madison topped all other state college combinations that year. Whited and Chesley also received state ranking in single rushing performances.

But, as in any other age, the big factor during the year 1950 was teamwork. It was the old story of eleven men with a task to perform. A case of each man doing his job and doing it well.
